e-Governance is gaining popularity as the efficient new way of delivering public services. This technology-driven method changes not just the way a service is delivered but also opens new avenues of communication between the government and the citizens. While e-Governance has the potential of enabling huge savings in costs, its implementation is still a challenging task. It is imperative that all inter-related e-Governance projects are properly planned, integrated, executed, controlled and closed, so that the desired results can be achieved in the chosen time frame.

e-Governance in India

The National e-Governance Plan (NeGP) of Indian Government seeks to lay the foundation and provide the impetus for long-term growth of e-Governance within the country. The plan seeks to create the right governance and institutional mechanisms, set up the core infrastructure and policies and implement a number of Mission Mode Projects at the centre, state and integrated service levels to create a citizen-centric and business-centric environment for governance.

Harness the power of Project Management in e-Governance

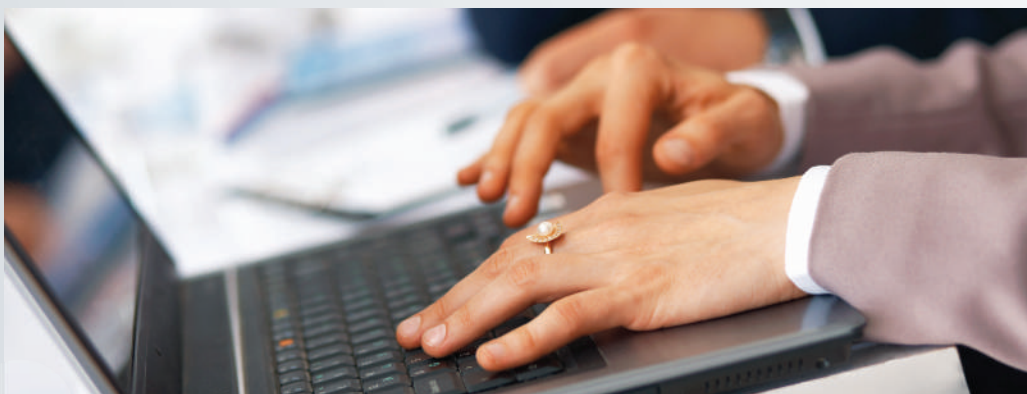

National Institute for Smart Government (NISG) in association with Project Management Institute (PMI), a global not-for-profit association established to promote the discipline of Project Management, are jointly organizing India's first conference on "Project Management in e-Governance" on 8th and 9th September at Hotel LaLiT Ashok in Bengaluru. This event will run parallel to the PMI India National Conference being held at the same venue between 8-10 September 2011.

The need for such a conference

Adoption and usage of Project Management practices is critical and have proven to deliver more efficient and optimal utilization of resources. However, there are numerous sector-specific challenges like change-management and transformational aspects of e-Government programmes which makes it more complex and further necessitates the adoption of Project Management practices. The conference highlights the various ways in which Project Management can enhance operational efficiency across various sectors.

Objective of the conference

The "Project Management in e-Governance" conference will deliberate to what extent Project Management practices have contributed to the successful deployment and implementation of e-Government projects in India. It will also identify the problems faced during implementation of projects in public sectors, and explore specific challenges of Project Management in e-Governance.

Who can attend?

- Senior Government officials
- Senior Head of Government Departments (HoDs)
- Senior project team members of NeGP Mission Mode Projects (MMPs)
- Senior members of the State e-Governance Mission Teams
- Project Managers from Public & Private Sectors
- Consultants and other individuals involved in NeGP

Participation possibilities

There are two core ways in which you can participate – as a delegate or as a sponsor. Either way, the benefits you enjoy are phenomenal!

Opportunities as a delegate

The conference presents an exciting platform for you to network with peers and expand your knowledge base. You will get to hear subject matter experts as speakers and understand in-depth details about real-life case studies.

Starting with the inaugural address by Dr. A.P.J. Abdul Kalam, Former President of India and Paryavaran Ambassador, this first-of-its-kind event promises to deliver quality, not just by the stature of its speakers but also in terms of the learning you will take home.
